ACQUIRED BRAIN INJURY (ABI)

An ABI is an injury caused to the brain since birth. Coping with the consequences can be difficult for everyone, including family members. We offer specialist work with children, young people and their families who are suffering from ABI and support them to make the transition back to daily life.

Our work includes the following outcomes:

- To develop and disseminate current knowledge and research of the impact of ABI on all areas of a child or young person's life (and that of their family) but especially regarding issues related to educational provision.
- To establish, enhance and maintain high quality relationships with other professionals involved in providing care and support for children with ABI.
- To ensure all members of the team are aware of the most recent information and approaches as well as providing any necessary support or advice through consultation, training and workshops.
- To optimise the efficacy of educational psychology support when working with children, young people and their families in the promotion of resilience and positive change.
